

“Wild Olympics is a great investment for the Harbor.”

Photo by Darrell M. Westmoreland

John Yonich, owner, D & R Theatre, Backstage Espresso, Scoops Ice Cream and Amore' Restaurant, Aberdeen, WA

bought, cut and shipped millions of board feet of wood products over the years. And I know our ancient rainforests are like nowhere else on Earth. People from all over the world come to marvel at the towering fir, spruce, and cedars in our forests. Sport fishermen come from all points to fish our rivers. Nearly 4,900 jobs—16 percent of all employment in our county—are dependent on travel dollars. I'm just one of 40 local Harbor businesses to support the Wild Olympics effort. Investors need certainty and want to know that what brings people here now will be here decades into the future. Wild Olympics can provide that. Let's not miss this opportunity.

Join the conversation.
www.WildOlympics.org

I am native to Aberdeen and a '72 Weatherwax grad. Like many, the wood industry called me early. Lots of hard work, a little luck, and some smarts, helped me to build a successful multi-national wood molding company, with manufacturing plants across the country. Yet, I've never forgotten my roots. Experiencing other parts of the world made coming home and investing in our community a priority. Renovating downtown is essential to completing this circle. So is protecting the unique amenities that bring people here in the first place.

I've sold, molded,